

Overview

Right to Work has been designed to support young adults with an intellectual disability to build employability skills and learn how to live their best lives.

This program supports the following NDIS goals:

- improved daily living
- improved health and wellbeing
- increased social and community participation
- finding and keeping a job
- improved relationships

For further information

visit www.righttowork.net.au

or contact:

Carolyn Roche
Business Manager
0427 280 567
carolyn@righttowork.net.au

Clare Jones
Program Manager
0448 653 046
clare@righttowork.net.au

Right Person | Right Skills | Right Role

Right to work

A local employment support program for young people with intellectual disabilities

www.righttowork.net.au

How the program works

The Right to Work team

- works with program learners to establish a culture of lifelong learning and healthy living
- works with each learner group to build project-based learning activities that develop employability skills
- works with local businesses to identify and customise supported work experience opportunities that align with each learners' strengths and interests.

How local business can be involved

For young adults with intellectual disability, suitable work experience opportunities can be hard to come by.

Right to Work program learners require a space to practice their skills and to experience the rewards of actively contributing to the workplace.

We understand that employers may feel they're not equipped to provide the necessary supports for young people with disability, or that they don't have suitable roles within their organisation.

At Right to Work, we understand these concerns. Our Managers will liaise with you to match the right Learner to the right tasks in your workplace.

You can host Learners for as little as two hours per week, and all Learners are accompanied by a Learning Support Worker who assists them in completing their tasks.

How local business can benefit

Diversity is critical to the success of any business. People with disability bring a range of skills, talents and abilities to the workplace and they are highly motivated and eager to learn.

Supporting young local people to build employability skills in the workplace will help to boost their self-esteem, expand their social networks and enhance their well-being.

There is no cost in time or money to you.

Your support and commitment to making our community more inclusive for young people with intellectual disability will be acknowledged on our website and on our social media platforms.

